

Adopt a Retired Easter Bunny

Many of our bunnies were dumped in shelters, and eventually came to us, because they were inappropriately purchased for young children. Often, they were bought on impulse by parents who had no idea of the care and commitment these bunnies would require! After the novelty has worn off, these bunnies are banished to a backyard hutch, end up at the shelters, or worse, set free outside to suffer the fate of being killed by predators, or to slowly starve to death.

Bunnies can make excellent pets for a quiet, adult household, or one where the children are closely supervised and the parents are the primary caregivers. We are asking people to make adoption an option, and rather than purchase from a breeder or a pet store, to adopt a Retired Easter Bunny from HRN, and give our former Easter Bunnies the "happily ever after" that they deserve!

Photo courtesy of healthememory.com

Tel: (781) 431-2111 Email: info@rabbitnetwork.org

www.rabbitnetwork.org

House Rabbit Network is an all volunteer 501(c)(3) non-profit dedicated to educating the public, to fostering and to the adoption of companion rabbits.

Adopt a Retired Easter Bunny

Many of our bunnies were dumped in shelters, and eventually came to us, because they were inappropriately purchased for young children. Often, they were bought on impulse by parents who had no idea of the care and commitment these bunnies would require! After the novelty has worn off, these bunnies are banished to a backyard hutch, end up at the shelters, or worse, set free outside to suffer the fate of being killed by predators, or to slowly starve to death.

Bunnies can make excellent pets for a quiet, adult household, or one where the children are closely supervised and the parents are the primary caregivers. We are asking people to make adoption an option, and rather than purchase from a breeder or a pet store, to adopt a Retired Easter Bunny from HRN, and give our former Easter Bunnies the "happily ever after" that they deserve!

Photo courtesy of healthememory.com

Tel: (781) 431-2111 Email: info@rabbitnetwork.org

www.rabbitnetwork.org

House Rabbit Network is an all volunteer 501(c)(3) non-profit dedicated to educating the public, to fostering and to the adoption of companion rabbits.

Adopt a Retired Easter Bunny

Many of our bunnies were dumped in shelters, and eventually came to us, because they were inappropriately purchased for young children. Often, they were bought on impulse by parents who had no idea of the care and commitment these bunnies would require! After the novelty has worn off, these bunnies are banished to a backyard hutch, end up at the shelters, or worse, set free outside to suffer the fate of being killed by predators, or to slowly starve to death.

Bunnies can make excellent pets for a quiet, adult household, or one where the children are closely supervised and the parents are the primary caregivers. We are asking people to make adoption an option, and rather than purchase from a breeder or a pet store, to adopt a Retired Easter Bunny from HRN, and give our former Easter Bunnies the "happily ever after" that they deserve!

Photo courtesy of healthememory.com

Tel: (781) 431-2111 Email: info@rabbitnetwork.org

www.rabbitnetwork.org

House Rabbit Network is an all volunteer 501(c)(3) non-profit dedicated to educating the public, to fostering and to the adoption of companion rabbits.

Adopt a Retired Easter Bunny

Many of our bunnies were dumped in shelters, and eventually came to us, because they were inappropriately purchased for young children. Often, they were bought on impulse by parents who had no idea of the care and commitment these bunnies would require! After the novelty has worn off, these bunnies are banished to a backyard hutch, end up at the shelters, or worse, set free outside to suffer the fate of being killed by predators, or to slowly starve to death.

Bunnies can make excellent pets for a quiet, adult household, or one where the children are closely supervised and the parents are the primary caregivers. We are asking people to make adoption an option, and rather than purchase from a breeder or a pet store, to adopt a Retired Easter Bunny from HRN, and give our former Easter Bunnies the "happily ever after" that they deserve!

Photo courtesy of healthememory.com

Tel: (781) 431-2111 Email: info@rabbitnetwork.org

www.rabbitnetwork.org

House Rabbit Network is an all volunteer 501(c)(3) non-profit dedicated to educating the public, to fostering and to the adoption of companion rabbits.